It is somehow expected; as the colours are used to distinguish the different users, and that second page is all about a single user.

Yep I'm stupid ;) but I renamed the bug since there is still something annoying.

Color was also useful because it made a thin white line appear between rows, a simple background would be helpful, and an odd/even rule for row background would be greater.

The nice thing with the new description is that I don't understand it at all; what does a "color helper" mean? Or is this just about your second paragraph, and the "also" was not indicating a different issue? If that's it, is r1858 working for you?
